THE SPLENDORS OF THE YELLOWSTONE.

A tract of land 55x65 miles has been set apart by law, about the sources of the Yellowstone and Missouri Rivers and been dedicated as a National Park and pleasure ground for the benefit and enjoyment of the public. The entire area within the limits of this Reservation is over 6,000 feet in altitude, and the Yellowstone Lake which occupies an area 15x22 miles or 360 square miles, is 7,427 feet in altitude. The ranges of mountains that hem the valleys in on every side, rise to the height 10,000 and 12,000 feet and are covered with snow the year around. These mountains are all of volcanic origin and hence it is not probable that any mines or minerals of value will ever be found there. During the months of June, July and August the climate is pure and most invigorating with scarcely any rain or storms of any kind. The whole region abounds in the most remarkable volcanic manifestations of the internal forces ever seen by human eye. Hot springs or geysers are adorned with decorations more beautiful than could be produced by art and which has required thousands of years for the cunning hand of nature to form.
